

The Many Paths on Immigration

The New York Times

May 23, 2006 Tuesday, Late Edition - Final

Copyright 2006 The New York Times Company

Section: Section A; Column 5; Editorial Desk; Pg. 24

Length: 86 words

Body

---

To the Editor:

It's precisely because Americans are fed up because they have to "press one for English" that the Senate voted for English to be the national language.

Previous generations of immigrants came to this country not knowing English, yet they learned our language and conformed to our customs -- not the other way around.

We always have been "Out of many, one," and that includes our one and only language, English.

The melting pot worked. Why change now?

Carla Wallach

Greenwich, Conn., May 21, 2006

<http://www.nytimes.com>

Classification

---

Language: ENGLISH

Document-Type: Letter

Publication-Type: Newspaper

Subject: IMMIGRATION (90%); LANGUAGE & LANGUAGES (88%)

Person: Carla Wallach

Geographic: CONNECTICUT, USA (53%); UNITED STATES (79%)

The Many Paths on Immigration

Load-Date: May 23, 2006

---

End of Document