

Immigrants Congest, and Improve, Our Towns

The New York Times

May 29, 2001 Tuesday, Late Edition - Final

Copyright 2001 The New York Times Company

Section: Section A; Column 5; Editorial Desk; Pg. 14

Length: 107 words

Body

---

To the Editor:

West Windsor, a township in central New Jersey, has many of the McMansions and immigrants that Paul Krugman describes in "My Beautiful Mansionette" (column, May 23).

We also have elected our first Chinese-American mayor, Shing-Fu Hsueh; he ran on a platform of controlling growth and preserving some of our natural environment.

Land management and traffic flow are problems that require innovation. While immigrants may swell our towns, they also add creativity and suggest novel solutions to our problems.

As in past generations, the diversity of America will be our strength.

SANDRA SHAPIRO

Princeton Junction, N.J.

May 23, 2001

<http://www.nytimes.com>

Classification

---

Language: ENGLISH

Document-Type: Letter

Publication-Type: Newspaper

Subject: MAYORS (88%); LAND USE & DEVELOPMENT (88%); CITY GOVERNMENT (87%); ASIAN AMERICANS (72%); PLATFORMS & ISSUES (71%)

Person: PAUL KRUGMAN (57%); SHAPIRO, SANDRA

Immigrants Congest, and Improve, Our Towns

Geographic: NEW JERSEY, USA (78%)

Load-Date: May 29, 2001

---

End of Document