

Fine the Employers Of the Exploited

The New York Times

September 6, 1992, Sunday, Late Edition - Final

Copyright 1992 The New York Times Company

Distribution: Long Island Weekly Desk

Section: Section 13LI;; Section 13LI; Page 21; Column 6; Long Island Weekly Desk; Column 6;; Letter

Length: 169 words

Body

The injustices to the Hispanics on the East End cannot be condoned, but we have never had a decent immigration policy and for the most part new arrivals have always been resented. ["Hispanic Influx Being Felt on East End," July 12]

I cannot understand why the employers have not been fined or brought up on any charges. When I hire anyone I have to fill out an IS9 form and have proper documentation or run the risk of being fined. How do they get away without this form? Perhaps if the employer not just the employee had to answer to the Immigration and Naturalization Service and were fined or audited when they call on one of the immigrants there would be a different attitude.

Obviously a lot of people are looking the other way.

As a child of immigrants I am forever thankful to be in this country and not in my parents' homeland, but, I do know how they were exploited. It can only happen when all laws (civil and moral) are tossed aside for the sake of the dollar.

LILA CHARNEY

Flushing

Classification

Language: ENGLISH

Subject: IMMIGRATION (91%); FINES & PENALTIES (90%); IMMIGRATION LAW (90%); PUBLIC POLICY (73%)

Company: IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%); IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%)

Organization: IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%); IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%); IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%); IMMIGRATION & NATURALIZATION SERVICE (57%)

Fine the Employers Of the Exploited

Load-Date: September 6, 1992

End of Document