A woman who married a United States citizen earlier this year and is five months pregnant has been deported to her native Philippines because she lived here illegally for nearly 10 years and ignored early deportation orders.

Although her lawyer contends her marriage makes her eligible for legal residence here, the woman, Eleanor Parnes, 29 years old, was put on a plane Thursday after Immigration Judge Jay Segal lifted an order barring the Immigration and Naturalization Service from deporting her.

Eleanor Parnes, woman who married US citizen Richard Parnes earlier in 1984 and who is five month pregnant, is deported to native Philippines because she lived in US illegally for nearly 10 years and ignored early deportation orders (S)

Her husband, Richard Parnes, said, "I couldn't even say goodbye."

Judge Segal said Mrs. Parnes could not apply to re-enter for five years.

Immigration officials said she lived in Los Angeles illegally since leaving her job as a housekeeper to the Philippine consul general in 1974.

Judge Segal said he based his decision on Mrs. Parnes's failure to comply with previous deportation orders, which he said "overcomes the favorable factor of her marriage."

He also refused to let her leave voluntarily, which would have allowed her to apply immediately to return.

It was Judge Segal who originally ordered her deported in 1979.
