Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Warren Moon plans to make this season his last in the NFL, saying he's accomplished everything he hoped for in his 22- year career except winning an NFL championship.

"This decision is pretty final," Moon said Wednesday on his Web site.

Moon, 43, signed a two-year free agent contract with the Chiefs in April 1999, joining the team as a backup to Elvis Grbac. He appeared in one game last season, completing one of three passes for 20 yards.

Moon started his pro career in the Canadian Football League, leading the Edmonton Eskimos to five championships. He has thrown for 49,117 yards and 290 touchdowns in the NFL since joining the Houston Oilers in 1984 and has also played for Seattle and Minnesota.

MORE PRO FOOTBALL: Deportation unlikely

Sebastian Janikowski, the Oakland Raiders' top draft choice, is unlikely to be deported, even if convicted on charges of possession of the "date-rape" drug GHB. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials said a resident alien with five years' residency, such as Janikowski, a Polish citizen, probably would not face deportation until a second drug offense. Florida State University Police arrested Janikowski this week and charged him with possession of the designer drug GHB. Janikowski, a star kicker while at Florida State, was recently acquitted of charges of trying to bribe a police officer. . . . A Camden, N.J., man has been convicted of attempted murder in connection with the 1996 shooting of former Atlanta Falcons running back Mike Rozier and a friend. Police testified that Rozier had tried to keep Louis Pierce from shooting a friend of Rozier's. Rozier, 36, was shot twice in the stomach and once in the hand. . . . The Seattle Seahawks signed two sixth- round draft choices, wide receiver James Williams and tackle Tim Watson. . . . The New England Patriots released defensive end Jon Harris.

CYCLING: Camenzind first

Oscar Camenzind of Switzerland won the Tour de Suisse, while Italy's Stefano Zanini took the final stage in a sprint finish. Camenzind maintained his 14-second advantage over Dario Frigo of Italy during the 110-mile race from Herisau to Baden and finished 26 seconds ahead of third-place Wladimir Belli, also of Italy. . . . The International Cycling Union said it would decide shortly what to do about a test to detect the banned hormone EPO. It was not immediately clear whether this would mean the test could still be approved in time for next month's Tour de France.

COLLEGE BASEBALL: Two Jackets make cut

Third baseman Mark Teixeira and second baseman Richard Lewis of Georgia Tech were among 22 players to make the final roster for the USA Baseball national team, following a week of tryouts in Tucson, Ariz. Teixeira, who batted .427 with 18 home runs for the Jackets last season, was the college player of the year. Lewis, who hit .398, was a second-team All-American. . . . South Carolina's Ray Tanner was chosen coach of the year by Baseball America magazine, the first coach to win the award whose team did not make it to the College World Series.

BRIEFLY: Moon: Season will be his last

Tanner led South Carolina to a 56-10 season, but the Gamecocks were ousted by Louisiana-Lafayette in the NCAA Super Regionals.
