Body

India and Pakistan, continuing along their two-year old peace process, released more prisoners: 152 Pakistanis from Indian jails and 435 Indians from Pakistani jails.

Most had been jailed for illegal entry and were released at the Wagah border crossing, 290 miles northwest of New Delhi. The two countries' leaders are scheduled to meet later this week on the sidelines of the United Nations meeting in New York to further advance the peace dialogue. Hari Kumar (NYT)

Correction

A report in the World Briefing column on Tuesday about a prisoner exchange by Pakistan and India as part of their two-year-old peace process referred incorrectly in some copies to the Wagah border crossing, 290 miles northwest of New Delhi. It is where the prisoners were set free, not where they were originally arrested.
