

Nazi Suspect Loses Appeal In Fighting Deportation Order

The New York Times

February 15, 1985, Friday, Late City Final Edition

Copyright 1985 The New York Times Company

Section: Section A; Page 21, Column 6; National Desk

Length: 103 words

Byline: UPI

Dateline: WASHINGTON, Feb. 14

Body

An immigration appeals board ruled today that John Demjanjuk, a retired Cleveland automobile worker accused of being a Nazi war criminal, should be deported from the United States.

Immigration appeals board rules that John Demjanjuk, retired Cleveland auto worker accused of being Nazi war criminal, should be deported from US (S)

The Board of Immigration Appeal dismissed Mr. Demjanjuk's appeal of a May 1984 decision by Adolph Angelilli, an administrative law judge, that he should be deported and also rejected his request for asylum. He may now appeal to Federal court.

Mr. Demjanjuk is accused of being a guard known as "Ivan the Terrible," responsible for the deaths of thousands of Jews at the Treblinka camp in Poland. He denies the charges.

Classification

Language: ENGLISH

Subject: DEMJANJUK WAR CRIMES CASE (91%); IMMIGRATION (90%); APPEALS (90%); DEPORTATION (90%); IMMIGRATION LAW (90%); WORLD WAR II (78%); INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS (78%); POLITICAL ASYLUM (78%); LITIGATION (78%); WAR CRIMES (73%); ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGES (73%); JUDGES (73%); ADMINISTRATIVE LAW (72%); AGENCY ADJUDICATION (72%); LAW COURTS & TRIBUNALS (71%)

Geographic: UNITED STATES (79%); POLAND (55%)