

Interactive map: Young illegal immigrants in U.S. who could benefit from new Obama immigration policy

San Jose Mercury News (California)

August 5, 2012 Sunday

Copyright 2012 San Jose Mercury News All Rights Reserved

Section: POLITICS; News

Length: 124 words

Body

---

More than 1 million immigrants who are younger than 31 and were brought to the country illegally when they were children could immediately qualify for two-year, renewable work permits and protection from being deported when a new policy takes effect Aug.15.

That includes 46,000 in the Bay Area and another 19,000 here who are children younger than 15 who could benefit when they grow older, according to the estimates by the Immigration Policy Center, an advocacy and research group based in Washington, D.C.

View number of potential beneficiaries based on current congressional districts.

Related: 65,000 Bay Area immigrants could benefit from deportation policy, study states

Data Center: Number and origin of immigrants eligible for work permits

Classification

---

Language: ENGLISH

Publication-Type: Newspaper

Subject: IMMIGRATION (92%); PASSPORTS & VISAS (90%); PUBLIC POLICY (90%); CHILDREN (78%); ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS (73%)

Geographic: DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, USA (79%); UNITED STATES (79%)

Load-Date: August 7, 2012