A 22-year-old woman was accused of pretending to be a Federal immigration officer in a money-making scheme in which she took aliens to an Immigration and Naturalization Service office to be fingerprinted.

District Attorney John J. Santucci of Queens said the woman, Adia Vasquez of 108-66 37th Avenue, Corona, had been ordered held in $10,000 bail by Justice Melvin D. Glass of State Supreme Court on charges of grand larceny, criminal impersonation and a scheme to defraud. She allegedly offered, for a $1,000 fee, to get a resident card for a down payment of $250 to $500, but never asked for a final payment since the card was never obtained.
