Speech to text transcript:¹

Good afternoon. President Trump has imposed sanctions on Turkey, and demanded its Nato ally stops its military incursion in northeast Syria - which is rapidly reshaping the eight-year conflict. European Union countries have also moved to broaden an arms-sale embargo against Turkey.

Despite this the Turkish army is continuing to shell Kurdish positions near the border. The European Union's chief negotiator has said reaching a Brexit deal this week is "difficult" but "still possible". Michel Barnier said work to secure a deal had been "intense" - after talks went on until midnight last night. Boris Johnson is trying to secure a fresh agreement in time for a two-day EU summit which starts tomorrow. The Prime Minister has condemned the racism at England's match against Bulgaria as "vile" and called on Uefa to conduct a swift investigation with tough penalties. England beat Bulgaria 6-0, but the game was overshadowed by racism in the stands - which included Nazi salutes and monkey chants. The match had to be halted twice in the first half, for Bulgarian fans to be warned about their conduct. The Former chief executive of Thomas Cook has told MPs he is "deeply sorry" he failed to save the company. The travel giant collapsed last month, resulting in 9,000 job losses, and leaving 150,000 British holiday-makers stranded abroad. MPs have been grilling former executives about the large bonuses paid in the run up to Thomas Cook's collapse. I am deeply sorry about this failure, and I am deeply sorry that this has cost it millions of customers who booked holidays with It took rescuers an hour to capture the snake, which was found near a shopping district. The expert catcher performed a brief ritual for luck before chasing the massive reptile into a sewer. The venomous cobra, which weighed over 30 pounds, was relocated to a wildlife sanctuary. That's the news, we're back tonight at seven and at lunchtime tomorrow. This afternoon, the UK will be mainly dry with variable cloud. However, parts of Northern Ireland, England and Wales may see the odd shower. Highs of 18 Celsius. Tonight, outbreaks of rain will edge into western areas, with a brisk wind. Meanwhile, the east will remain drier and cooler with patchy fog forming. Lows of 5 Celsius. Tomorrow, a band of rain will continue to push further east, allowing for dry and bright conditions to follow on behind. However, rain may linger over eastern areas. It wouldn't be so bad, if he tried to make himself look like a normal woman! Tell Prue not to talk with her mouth full. So
